Message from the Secretary of State

Sam Reed

Secretary of State

The 2004 elections demonstrate the power of a single vote.

Generations from now, Washingtonians will note the mind-boggling 133 votes that separated our two leading candidates for Governor.

Get-out-the-vote campaigns will tout the narrow margin—46/10,000ths of 1%—as history's great example that every vote counts.

They'll encourage young people to have a say in their future—because every vote counts.

They'll remind parents that elections impact schools and their kids are depending on them—and that every vote counts.

And they'll count on seniors to recognize that single votes can influence their retirement, and the lives of their children and grandchildren.

The unprecedented Governor's race, one of our country's closest, resulted in a series of election mistakes, statewide controversy, and a public mandate for change.

I salute our electorate for holding election administrators accountable.

Our voting process will be better for it.

I also salute Washington's outstanding county election officials who are implementing these essential reform measures.

But for all that we have learned from two recounts and an election contest, the greatest lesson is the importance of a single voice and our civic duty to vote.

Sam Reed,
Secretary of State

Executive Summary

Nick Handy
Director of Elections

The 2004 election will long be remembered as one of the most remarkable elections in Washington history.

New Primary

Washington's popular "blanket primary" was declared unconstitutional by the federal courts in 2003. The 2004 Washington Legislature responded by passing a "top-two" primary in which the two candidates receiving the most ballots would proceed to the general election ballot. In an 11th hour political compromise, the Legislature added a "Pick-a-Party" style primary to the bill as an alternative in the event the top-two primary encountered unfavorable legal rulings.

Governor Locke then vetoed the top-two primary from the bill leaving only the "Pick-a-Party" style primary requiring voters to privately select a party ballot. After the Washington Supreme Court upheld the Governor's veto in June 2004, Washington election officials implemented the new and historic "Pick-a-Party" primary on September 14, 2004.

At the November 2, 2004 general election, however, voters approved Initiative 872 that reinstated the top-two primary.*

* This initiative was ruled unconstitutional on July 15, 2005 by Federal District Court Judge Thomas S. Zilly

Governor's Race Recount

In the 2004 general election, Washington experienced the closest Governor's race in U.S. history, and the closest statewide election in state history.

Republican Dino Rossi maintained a lead over Democrat Christine Gregoire of only 262 votes out of 2.8 million cast after certification of the original count.

A statewide mandatory machine recount resulted in Rossi maintaining a razor-thin 42-vote margin.

After the State Democratic Party requested a manual recount with the deposit of $730,000 with the state, a statewide manual recount ensued resulting in Gregoire winning the election by a margin of 129 votes.

The State Republican Party and individuals filed an election challenge in Chelan County Superior Court contesting the election. Following trial in May and June 2005, Chelan County Superior Court Judge John Bridges ruled that 1678 illegal votes were cast in the General Election in November. He further ruled that four votes should be subtracted from Dino Rossi and one vote should be removed from Ruth Bennett resulting in Christine Gregoire winning by 133 votes. This had the effect of no change in the end result and the case was not appealed. Thus, Christine Gregoire retained her position as Governor of Washington.

Voter Outreach and Education

The most significant challenge for the Elections Voter Outreach and Education Program in 2004 was to educate Washington voters about the new primary. The “blanket” primary was in place for 70 years, and the new primary was unfamiliar to voters registered before the 2002 primary. The task was to make the new primary familiar—to promote voter participation, and help voters avoid mistakes that might render ballots invalid.

The Office of the Secretary of State printed and mailed a reader-friendly primary guide to more than 3 million households in Washington prior to the primary. Explanatory ads were broadcast on radio, television, the Seattle Mariners’ stadium screen and 308 movie screens statewide. The Office of the Secretary of State website allowed voters easy access to details regarding their respective counties’ ballots and election equipment. At 45.14%, turnout for the primary was higher than forecasted.

General Election

Twenty-two editions of Washington’s constitutionally required state voters’ pamphlet were distributed among more than 3 million households for the 2004 general election. Different editions went to different geographical areas. All contained basic information about voting plus comprehensive information about ballot measures and candidate statements from among more than 600 candidates seeking federal, statewide, or legislative office. In compliance with federal law, the pamphlet was printed in Spanish for three counties and in Chinese for three specific areas in King County. Select information was available on our website in Russian and Korean versions, in Braille, audiocassette and large print were also available.

The 2004 voter outreach focused on the group least likely to vote: 18- to 24-year-olds. Work began on a college civics commission to coordinate voter outreach, education and registration opportunities at colleges and universities. The office also pursued federal funding for a college poll worker program and a mock election program aimed at younger students.

Election Legislation

The major election legislation during the 2004 legislative session involved the primary system.

New Primary

The previous primary election system, known as the blanket primary, allowed voters to vote for any candidate, regardless of the candidate or voter's party affiliation. Minor party and independent candidates held nominating conventions to appear on the primary election ballot.

In 2000, the three major political parties in Washington—the Democratic Party, the Republican Party and the Libertarian Party—sued the Office of the Secretary of State to prohibit use of the blanket primary system. In 2003, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals found the Washington blanket primary unconstitutional because it allowed voters who are not affiliated with a political party to select that party's nominees, thereby violating the political parties' right to freedom of association. Democratic Party of Washington State v. Reed, 343 F.3d 1198 (9th Cir. 2003).

The Legislature approved a new form of primary for partisan offices when it passed ESB 6453 (2004 c 271). The bill included two types of primary election systems: a top-two primary, in which the top-two vote-getters advance to the general election, regardless of the candidates' party affiliation, and a traditional nominating primary that requires voters to pick a party and vote down the party line.

Governor Locke vetoed the top-two primary and enacted the nominating primary, known as a "Pick-a-Party" style open, private choice primary. Under this form of primary, voters may not cross over and vote for candidates of another party. The primary is considered "open" because all eligible registered voters may participate and no party registration is required. The primary is considered "private" because the political party a voter selects is not public information or a public record. The partisan primary is for major party candidates only. Minor party and independent candidates proceed directly to the general election ballot once the nominating convention requirements are satisfied.

Certification and Training

The Certification and Training Program is the direct line of communication between the Office of the Secretary of State and each County Auditor's office. While there are three main responsibilities, the fall of 2004 was primarily focused on the close election. The three main functions of the program are certification and training of election administrators, election procedure reviews, and serving as a clearinghouse for election information.

The Certification Program

State law requires each county to have at least two Certified Election Administrators on staff. Once certified, 18 hours per year of continuing education and continuous employment in election administration are required. The Certification and Training Program provides various training opportunities through the annual Election Administrator Conference and various regional workshops throughout the year. In 2004, two orientation trainings were held. In addition to the annual conference and orientation training, eight training sessions were held covering the new Washington primary, manual recounts, and other pertinent subjects.

Election Procedure Reviews

Election reviews are essentially a performance audit conducted during an election. The reviewer is looking for compliance with state law, areas where security can be tightened, increased efficiency, and improved election administration. At the end of the review, a written report is issued as a public record. Four counties were reviewed during the 2004 primary and general elections.

Clearinghouse

The Certification and Training Program provides up-to-date information for county administrators in a variety of forms. Election advisories and clearinghouse notices are issued whenever important information or legal opinions are issued. The Program also maintains a website containing pertinent information for election administration.

Electronic Voting Policy

The Help America Vote Act of 2002 requires disability access voting equipment to be implemented by January 1, 2006. Most disability access voting equipment is electronic in nature. To meet the new requirements of HAVA, the Office of the Secretary of State adopted an electronic voting policy consisting of recommendations and rules pertaining to certification of voting systems, training of poll workers, procedures for using the equipment, and security practices.

Under the new policy, the rules governing the certification of voting systems were updated to reflect new technology and the changing information needed to certify in Washington. While the requirements for systems to meet federal standards, and be certified and used in at least one state, remain the same, no telephone, internet or wireless connections will be allowed. Source code for electronic voting systems must be placed in escrow and be accessible by the Office of the Secretary of State for review when necessary. All electronic voting devices are required to have a voter verified paper audit trail by January 1, 2006.

Poll worker training continues to be critical to the success of poll site elections. With implementation of new technology at the poll sites, poll workers must have the ability to operate and assist voters in the operation of these devices.

To that end, the Office of the Secretary of State mandated the development of a statewide program and curriculum for training poll workers. This curriculum provides best practices and procedures for poll workers.

The Secretary's policy on electronic voting includes procedures for Election Day communication plans, posting poll site results and penalties for tampering with a voting device. The policy also requires acceptance testing by the county when implementing new systems, and a poll site audit following an election.

Security remains the number one concern about electronic voting devices. To that end, the policy requires that until the voter verified paper audit trail is implemented, parallel monitoring will be conducted in any county with direct recording equipment. In implementing an electronic voting system, the counties are required to have a technical security plan to be published and available to the public. The Office of the Secretary of State will conduct reviews of voting systems to ensure that all systems meet the requirements of state certification.

A logic and accuracy test on all tabulating equipment will continue to be conducted by the Office of the Secretary of State in each county before each primary and general election.

Help America Vote Act (HAVA)

The United States Congress passed the Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA) in response to the 2000 Presidential General Election and the voting irregularities that occurred in Florida. The purpose of HAVA is to provide funds to states to improve election administration and replace outdated voting systems, to create a new federal agency to serve as a clearinghouse for election administration, and to create minimum standards for states to follow in several key areas of election administration. Washington has developed and filed a state plan addressing implementation of HAVA. That plan is available at <http://www.secstate.wa.gov/elections/reform>.

SSB 6419 (2004 c 267) changes Washington state election law as necessary to comply with HAVA. The legislation accomplished the following: authorizes the Office of the Secretary of State to create and maintain a statewide voter registration database; transfers much of the responsibilities for maintaining the lists of registered voters from the County Auditors to the Office of the Secretary of State; requires a voter to provide a driver's license number, state ID card number, or the last four digits of the social security number when registering to vote; creates a grant program for counties to access federal funds; requires that a voting device accessible to the visually impaired be located in each polling place by January 1, 2006; and requires a voter who appears at a polling place and is not on the voter registration list to be given a provisional ballot. Federal funds will also be used to replace punch card voting equipment throughout the state.

Equipment Certification

All voting system equipment and software used to tabulate ballots in Washington must be certified by the Office of the Secretary of State.

The biggest single issue for the Voting Systems Certification program in 2004 was the provisional certification required when Governor Locke vetoed the top-two portion of the 2004 primary bill passed in April. The law left in place after the governor's veto required that the Pick-a-Party feature on a "consolidated" ballot work in a manner different than any of the certified voting systems in Washington. Provisional certifications were issued by the state to permit use of these systems in the 2004 election.

Since inadequate time existed for vendors to modify systems tested by the national independent testing authorities, the certification program created an extensive test plan for each system. During July and August, the central count and precinct counters, including Direct Recording Equipment (DREs) of four vendors – ES&S, Diebold, Hart Intercivic, and Sequoia – were tested in seven different counties - Pierce, Kitsap, King, Chelan, Klickitat, Yakima, and Snohomish.

The Office of the Secretary of State in July 2004 adopted a new policy to implement electronic voting in this state. Significant policies included parallel monitoring of DRE devices in Snohomish and Yakima during the 2004 fall elections, and the establishment of a five member Voting Systems Certification Review Board.

Voter Registration Database (VRDB)

The Help America Vote Act of 2002 creates dramatic change to voter registration systems in all 50 states. For at least the past fifty years in Washington, voter registration has been conducted and maintained by local county election officials. With the passage of HAVA, that responsibility is shifting to the state. HAVA mandates that each state "...implement in a uniform and nondiscriminatory manner, a single, uniform, official, centralized, interactive computerized statewide voter registration list defined, maintained, and administered at the State level..."

Washington began developing and building this statewide database in 2004. The hiring of a project manager and a team of programmers, as well as the use of outside consultants, together with the collaboration of staff from the state Elections Division and the Counties' Election Offices, heralded the beginning of a two year project. The statewide database will allow counties to continue processing voter registrations locally, automatically updating the state database at the same time. The state will conduct verification of identity, as required by HAVA, by comparing information in the Department of Licensing database, and checking for duplicates upon entry. Furthermore, the state will conduct regular list maintenance involving comparisons with other state agency databases, such as the Department of Health, the Department of Corrections, and the Administrator of the Courts.

The statewide voter registration database is scheduled to deploy January 1, 2006.

Initiatives and Referenda

Fifty-three Initiatives to the People were filed in 2004, but only three submitted signatures to the Office of the Secretary of State and were certified to the general election ballot.

Twenty-six Initiatives to the Legislature were filed in 2004. Two of these Initiatives to the Legislature, Initiative No. 330 and Initiative No. 336, submitted signatures to the Office of the Secretary of State and were certified to the Legislature.

One Initiative to the Legislature from 2003 was placed on the ballot for the November 2, 2004 general election.

Initiative Measure No. 297

This measure would add new provisions concerning "mixed" radioactive and nonradioactive hazardous waste, including cleanup and enforcement. This initiative was filed June 9, 2003 by Mr. Gerald M. Pollet.

Initiative Measure No. 330

This measure would change laws governing claims for negligent healthcare, including restricting noneconomic damages, shortening time limits, limiting repayments to insurers and claimants' attorney fees. This initiative was filed June 17, 2004 by Dr. Jeffrey B. Collins.

Initiative Measure No. 336

This measure concerns medical malpractice, including insurance, healthcare provider licensing, and lawsuits. This initiative was filed August 30, 2004 by Mr. Lawrence B. Shannon, Ms. Judy I. Massong, Ms. Cheryl Ann Marshall and Mr. Israel Dylan Malone.

Initiative Measure No. 872

This measure would allow voters to select among all candidates in a primary and was known as the "top-two" primary. The two candidates receiving the most votes would advance to the general election, regardless of party. This initiative was filed January 8, 2004 by Mr. Terry Hunt on behalf of the Washington State Grange and was passed by voters in the November 2, 2004 general election.

Initiative Measure No. 884

This measure would create an education trust fund for smaller classes, extend learning programs, increase certain salaries, increase preschool access, and expand college enrollments and scholarships, funded by increasing retail sales tax by 1%. This initiative was filed February 27, 2004 by Ms. Lisa D. MacFarlane and was rejected by voters in the November 2, 2004 general election.

Initiative Measure No. 892

This measure would authorize licensed non-tribal gambling establishments to operate the same type and number of machines as tribal governments, with a portion of tax revenue generated used to reduce state property taxes. This initiative was filed March 23, 2004 by Mr. Tim Eyman and was rejected by voters in the November 2, 2004 general election.

Three Referenda were filed in 2004. One qualified for the November ballot.

Referendum Measure No. 55

This bill would authorize charter public schools and would set conditions on operations. Charter schools would be operated by qualified nonprofit corporations, under contracts with local education boards, and allocated certain public funds. This referendum was filed March 29, 2004 by Mr. Charles E. Hasse and was rejected by voters in the November 2, 2004 general election.

2004 PRIMARY ELECTION
STATISTICS

Presidential Preference Primary

The Presidential Preference Primary was created by Initiative No. 99 to the Legislature in 1989. This Primary was used in 1992, 1996, and 2000 to indicate the public preference for a presidential candidate from each major political party. The political parties are allowed to determine how they will use the results of this Primary in choosing delegates to the national conventions.

In 2004, Washington did not hold a Presidential Preference Primary. The Democratic Party announced that it would not use the results of the preference primary to determine its delegates, but would rely on the precinct caucuses. The Republican Party announced that it would be using the results of the preference primary to determine one third of its delegates. Since the sitting President was Republican, and certain to be the nominee, the Legislature voted to suspend the Primary and to give the Office of the Secretary of State the $6 million budgeted for it. These monies were divided among the Counties' election offices to offset the increased cost of conducting the "Pick-a-Party" style primary in September 2004.

Washington has not required party affiliation for voter registration since 1934.

We have no voter registration percentages by party.

Turn out percentages are based on total registration for the state.

Libertarian Party captured 5% of the vote in the 2000 General Election and became a Major Political Party.

John Pearson,
30 Years of Service

July 31, 2004 brought the retirement of a 30 year veteran in Elections. Fresh out of the Navy as a Lieutenant during the Vietnam War, and following a brief stay at the State Treasurer's Office, John began his career with the Secretary of State's Office in April of 1974, under Secretary of State Lud Kramer. At the time, Sam Reed was Assistant Secretary of State and did the actual hiring of Mr. Pearson. John went on to work under Secretaries Kramer, Chapman, Munro, and Reed, and distinguished himself and the Elections Division with his ability to thoroughly analyze situations and to create policy responsive to the public interest.

John was a mentor to many within the Elections Division during his 30 years of service, some of whom have gone on to work in other areas of state or local government, while still others continue at the Secretary's office or in the private sector. His understanding of election law history and its significance to current law was phenomenal. While he might occasionally forget where he laid his glasses, he could quote case law from 1973 on obscure but relevant points of election law. His understanding of not only what the law said but why it was enacted in the first place often proved invaluable.

He was also responsible for managing the first Certification and Training Program for election administrators in Washington and was the author of the infamous Election Administrator Test. John is also famous for his many quotes. Such sayings as, "That's all very interesting, but what does it have to do with me?" helped to remind us that we should stay focused on what is pertinent.

With the new Primary in 2004, John was brought back temporarily to consult and help with the implementation of rules and continued to aid the Elections office through the General Election. When his contract was finished, John once again tried to retire. The Governor's contest litigation required John's presence several more times. Finally, in June of 2005, John was allowed to return to retirement.

County Auditors, Election Supervisors, and the Office of the Secretary of State wish John a long and happy retirement.
